Living Her Dream Danielle's Journey Comes Full Circle

November is Youth Hope Month, shining a light on youth homelessness nationwide and here at home. Rather than wait until November, we begin now by sharing the story of one young woman who beat the odds and is now giving back to the same community that once supported her.

Danielle's journey is one of resilience, hope, and transformation. Today, she serves as a Case Manager with Advocates for Children, working in the very program that once gave her stability and direction. "Being on the other side of where I was feels amazing. I was able to take the resources from the program and fly," Danielle said. "Now, those same resources that helped me get to where I am today, I can give to the clients I encounter."

As the eldest of twelve children, Danielle shouldered heavy responsibilities early in life. When her family connected with Advocates through the Family Resource Center, she found a lifeline. Her turning point came when she entered the Youth Independent Housing (YIH) program. More than a safe place to live, YIH gave her the tools and encouragement to dream beyond survival. Danielle secured employment, learned to manage her own home, purchased her first car, and began planning for her future.

Her case manager, Kendall Lewis, recalls, "I feel fortunate to have had Danielle as one of my first clients when I was new to case management and the Advocates team. She was young and learning how to navigate resources, while I was learning how to guide clients through those same systems."

With support from Advocates, Danielle pursued her education, interned with the Public Defender's Office in Atlanta, and volunteered in her community. Today, her optimism and determination inspire others to believe that brighter days are possible.

Join us in giving more youth like Danielle the chance to build a future filled with hope.

Leading with Heart Rachel's National Recognition

We are proud to celebrate our President and CEO, Rachel Castillo, who was awarded the 2025 Executive Leadership Award from the National Safe Place Network (NSPN).

The leadership award from NSPN honors leaders dedicated to serving youth experiencing homelessness and creating safe, supportive spaces. Rachel's vision and passion have shaped programs across Northwest Georgia, giving vulnerable youth stability and opportunity.

Reflecting on the recognition, Rachel shared, "This honor is truly humbling. My passion is making sure every young person has a safe place to turn into crisis. The real honor is working with an incredible team, especially Christina Bach and the Newman House team, who built a strong Safe Place network across 11 counties, giving countless youth hope and safety."

Adding to the significance of the award, Rachel's nomination came from longtime colleague Rhonda Hall, retired Sr. Director of Residential Services, whom Rachel called "one of the most caring women I've ever served alongside."

Safe Place is a national program that helps youth in crisis find immediate support. In our region, kids can go to restaurants, gas stations, libraries, or fire stations showing the yellow and black Safe Place sign to find immediate help. Meet The Walker Family

On a day when she had reached her breaking point, a young mother, Crystal Walker, walked through our doors with her four children, daughters ages 14, 12, and 6, and a 9-year-old son. After enduring significant trauma and stress, Crystal and her children felt overwhelmed and desperate for support. What they needed was more than immediate resources, they needed stability, guidance, and compassion.

That's where our Family Resource Center (FRC) stepped in. The FRC provides families with essentials like clothing, food, and supplies while helping them move toward lasting stability. For the Walkers, that meant rental assistance to avoid eviction and support with their basic needs. Family Navigator Niki Stodghill has walked alongside them, connecting the family with local nonprofits, churches, and government agencies to ensure ongoing care and support.

In just a few months, the Walkers began to regain their footing. Their journey is not over, but with Advocates standing beside them in the year ahead, they now have something priceless, hope for a brighter and more stable future, with their children safe at home.

Names changed for privacy

Dear Advocates for Children,

I want to say thank you from the bottom of my heart. The past two years have been the most difficult of my life. I was left trying to hold myself together in a world that felt like it was crumbling. I lost friends, family, and almost lost myself. I'm still here. I'm still trying. And I'm learning to hope again. And I just want to say, from the most honest place in me, thank you. For seeing me. For helping. And for giving me a reason to keep going.

With all my heart,

Crystal

Celebrating Our CASA Team's Big Win!

Advocates CASA of Northwest Georgia has been honored with the 2025 Innovative Program Award of Excellence from Georgia CASA. This award celebrates the creativity and dedication our team brings to serving foster children while inspiring new advocates and stronger community connections.

CASA volunteers are appointed by juvenile courts to be a child's voice, supporting families and guiding judges toward safe, stable homes. This year, 16 new advocates joined our program, amplifying children's voices in Bartow and Gordon counties through creative outreach like yard signs, coffee sleeves, and local festivals.

As we mark 25 years of service in Bartow and continue growing in Gordon, this recognition is a powerful reminder of how compassion and creativity change lives.

"We couldn't be prouder of our CASA staff, volunteers, and supporters who made this award possible. This honor belongs to everyone who believes in the potential of every child," said Emily Ciavorro, Director.
